These are just some of the titles that could be used to describe Gospel music legend Sherman Andrus. But even that doesn't come close to encompassing all that this gentleman has accomplished in his career that spans six decades and more than 40 recording projects. This Grammy Award-winning singer has been inducted into the Gospel Music Hall Of Fame not once, but twice. He has sang with such household names as The Imperials, Andrae Crouch and The Disciples, and Andrus Blackwood and Company.

Throughout his career, he has broken down barriers. In fact, he is often credited with breaking the color barrier in Contemporary Christian music when he joined the Imperials as their lead singer, where he remained for five years. Since that time, this talented man has sung his way into the hearts of millions of people world-wide.

Sherman and his wife, Winnie, make their home in the greater Oklahoma City area.
